Gesuch eingereicht: 13. Dezember 1954, 17¾ Uhr — Patent eingetragen: 15. Februar 1958
(Priorität: Niederlande, 30. März 1954)

Behälter für Rauchwaren

Die Erfindung betrifft einen Behälter für Rauchwaren.

Der Behälterkörper ist mit einem Deckel versehen, der als Aschenbecher ausgebildet ist. Dieser Deckel hat zweckmäßig am Umfange seiner Vertiefung eine Nut zum Aufnehmen des obern Randes des Behälterkörpers. Bei einer Ausführungsform hat der Behälter mit dem in umgekehrter Lage als Deckel darauf gesetzten Aschenbecher die Form eines Pilzes, dessen Stiel vom Behälterkörper gebildet wird, da hierbei der Deckel mit seinem Rande seitlich über den Rand des Behälterkörpers ausragt.

In der Zeichnung, in welcher ein Ausführungsbeispiel der Erfindung dargestellt ist, zeigt Fig. 1 eine perspektivische Darstellung des Behälters mit seinem Deckel in der geschlossenen Lage.

Fig. 2 ist eine perspektivische Darstellung des Behälters in der geöffneten Lage.

Fig. 3 ist ein Schnitt durch den Deckel in vergrößertem Maßstabe nach der Linie III—III in Fig. 2.

Der Behälterkörper 1 ist oben durch einen Deckel 3 geschlossen, der die Form eines Aschenbechers aufweist und mit einer Nut 6 zum Aufnehmen des obern Randes 2 des Behälterkörpers am Umfang seiner Vertiefung 4 versehen ist. Der Aschenbecher 3 hat in seinem flachen obern Rande Vertiefungen 5 zum Aufnehmen von Zigarren oder Zigaretten.

Wie aus Fig. 1 hervorgeht, hat der Behälterkörper mit dem darauf gesetzten Aschenbecher die Form eines Pilzes. Dieser Behälter kann aus jedem geeigneten Material oder jeder beliebigen Kombination von Materialien, wie keramischem Material, Kunststoffen, Holz, Metall oder Glas, hergestellt werden.

PATENTANSPRUCH

Behälter für Rauchwaren, dadurch gekennzeichnet, daß der Behälterkörper mit einem als Aschenbecher ausgebildeten Deckel versehen ist.

UNTERANSPRUCH

Behälter nach dem Patentanspruch, dadurch gekennzeichnet, daß der Deckel am Umfange seiner Vertiefung eine Nut zum Aufnehmen des obern Randes des Behälterkörpers hat.

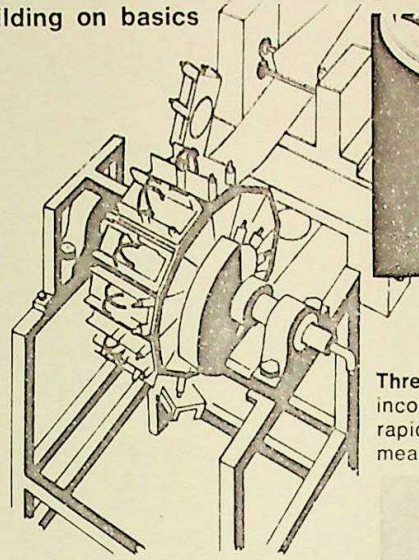
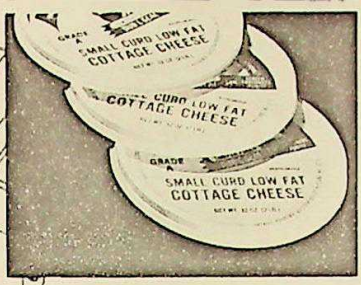
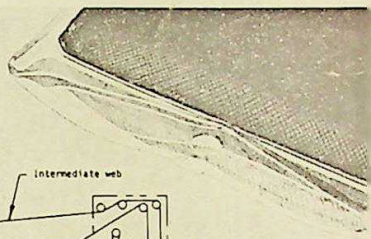
Cold forming, eliminating costly post-decoration, gets first food use by Miami Margarine.

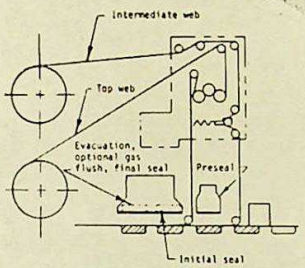


Inplant lid maker extrudes, forms, prints and trims—and recycles scrap—in continuous "as-need" operation. Rotary former also minimizes floor-space needs.



Three-web system of thermoforming, incorporating porous intermediate film for rapid air evacuation, brings "luncheon-meat speed" to vacuum-packaged granulars.





Aug. 1971

forming should generate interest among packagers of a wide variety of foods.

Similar in results but different in technique is a combination sheet-forming/fabricating process licensed to Wilkie & Paul, Scotland. In this system, reel-fed thermoplastic sheet is pre-printed in up to eight colors before being cut into strips and side-seam welded to tapered-cup configurations (sketch). In a continuous operation, the machine also vacuum-forms container lids (similarly pre-printed) and bottoms (welded to the body).

For packagers who want the economy and inventory control of do-it-yourself, fast new rotary inplant extrusion/thermoformers for lids and shallow containers are available. Among them is a complete in-line system, occupying only about 8 by 15 ft., that produces more than 8,000 8-oz.-cup lids at a total cost (including labor) of $1.60 per thousand (Thompson International). The system, which automatically reprocesses scrap as it is produced, costs $47,000—including extruder, 12-station drum-style former, offset printer, trim press and trim-recovery/regrind unit (photo).

Higher lid-forming speeds (32,000 per hr.) at a higher price tab ($102,000) are embodied in another inplant system from Johnson Machinery.

On both of these extrusion/thermoformers, a plus factor is that material undergoes just one heat experience, rather than the conventional heat/reheat cycle. This is, of course, beneficial for vinyls and other materials that are sensitive to processing temperatures. And because lids or shallow containers are formed at high extrusion temperature, better detail is achieved.

Accelerating speed is a recurrent theme in forming-machine engineering these days, as visitors to the recent AMA National Packaging Show could testify (MP, June '71, p. 57). And improvements keep coming. Two examples:

▶ Granular products requiring vacuum or gas-flush packaging historically couldn't be handled at efficient thermoforming speeds. Reason: difficulty in keeping them in place during air evacuation. But now a new machine (Standard Packaging) solves this problem via an intermediate "third web" of porous film that securely restrains products as finely granular as powdered potatoes, yet permits rapid air evacuation (photo).

What do you do when the demand is greater than the supply?

One thing we don't do is stop building that demand.

We continue the heavy advertising that made the products tops in their categories. And we tool up to meet the demand head on. That's Gillette's plan for 1974—big demand, big supply!

DRI-CAL™ Gravure Decorating and Labeling In One Easy Pass

Dri-Cal is a unique, heat-transfer method of decorating or labeling products and packages with beautiful, full-color gravure printing in one easy application. Dri-Cal offers all the design freedom and the exquisite eye-appeal of fine quality gravure plus other important advantages.

Add the glow of metal. Dri-Cal is a band of polyester film that carries the gravure image, pre-printed in multiple colors and tones with any design, drawing, photograph, halftones, or typographic layout imaginable. You can also include metallic foils for a finish that truly gleams for attention.

Permanent application. The complete Dri-Cal design is instantly transferred with heat and pressure. Permanently fused into the surface being decorated. Unlike silk screening or labeling, it can't chip, crack, scratch, peel or rub off . . . even under tough conditions.

Superb reproduction, precise register. With Dri-Cal the most delicate designs and the finest type are crisp and clean. And they can be positioned on the product with exact register, in small tight areas and extreme tolerances not possible with other methods.

Fast, low-cost production. Dri-Cal is applied in one easy pass. No pre or post flame curing is necessary. Equipment is high-speed, inexpensive, simple to operate and maintain. Process is pollution free. Minimum space and inventory needs. Run what you want when you want it. Compared with silk screening or labeling, applying Dri-Cal costs far less per finished piece . . . and the results are incomparably better.

Dri-Cal has already solved many unusual decorating and labeling problems in housewares, cosmetics, and other fields. It could be your answer too.

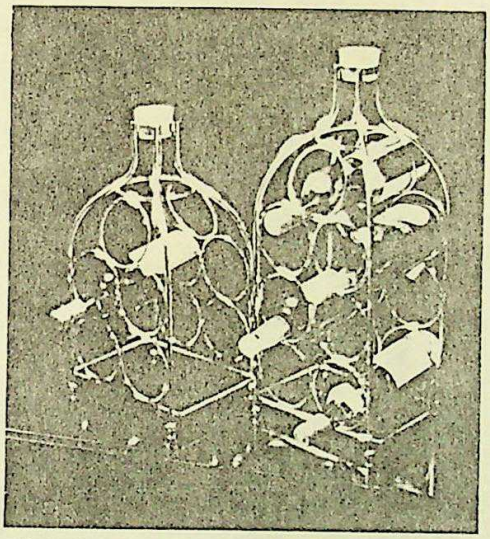
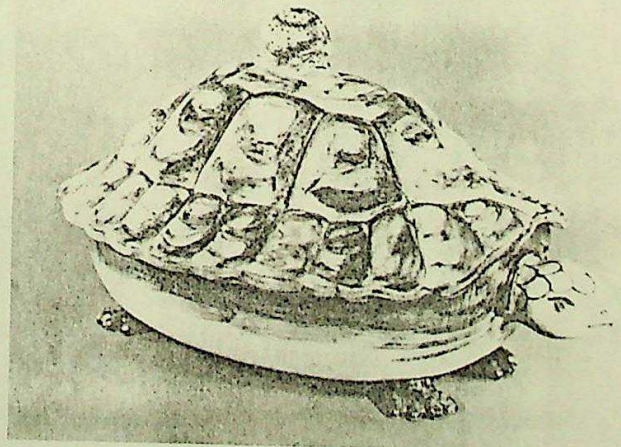
Shower gifts for this year's holiday bride combine function with both fun and elegance. As double-digit inflation continues to prompt more at-home entertaining, serving accessories are becoming a very important element in setting up new households. This is the year that servers often look like what they do, running the gamut from an escargot server shaped like a snail to a wine rack in the form of a wine bottle.

As You See 'Em



Silverplated wine racks have open work frames that look just like wine bottles. Complete with corks. Five-bottle rack, $26; seven-bottle, $29. Silverdot, 250 W. 57 St., New York 10019.

Nickelplated nutcracker cracks and catches the shell of the walnut. $18.50. Edwin Jay, 515 W. 24 St., New York 10011.



Porcelain turtle tureen is a reproduction of an original made by the Schrezheim factory in Germany during the 1800's. Footed tureen dish decorated in soft greens and muted yellows with a snail serving as a knob for the lid. $95. The Nelson Rockefeller Collection, 11 E. 57th St., New York 10022.

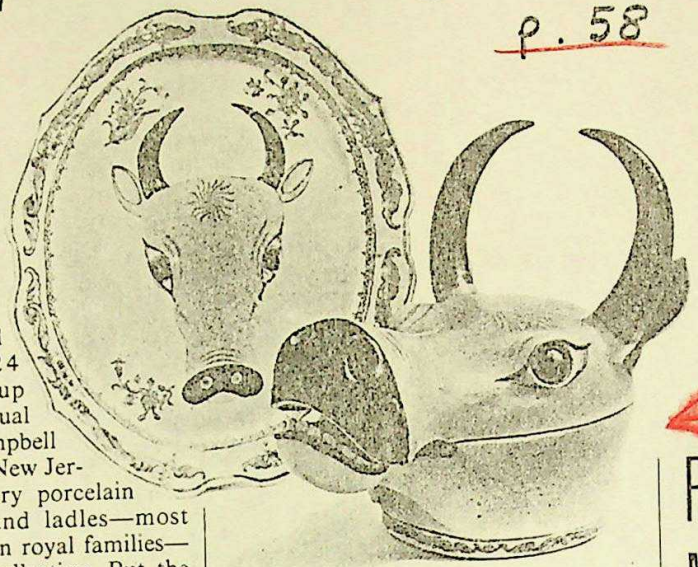
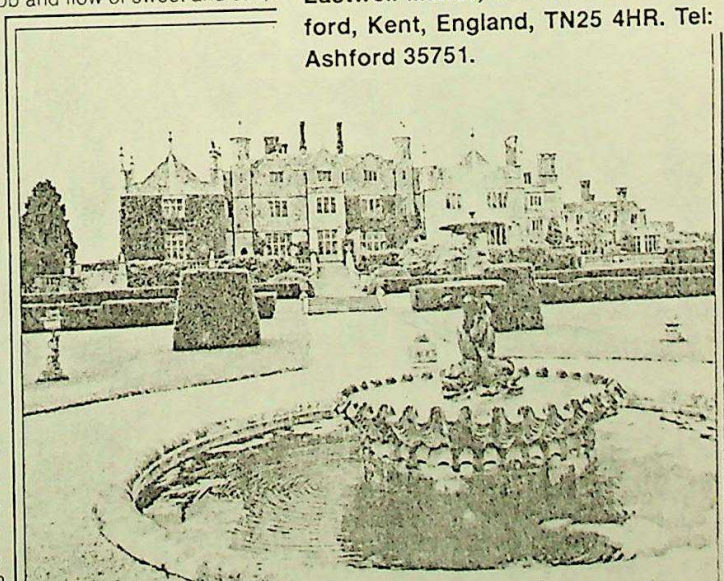
SOUPER MUSEUM



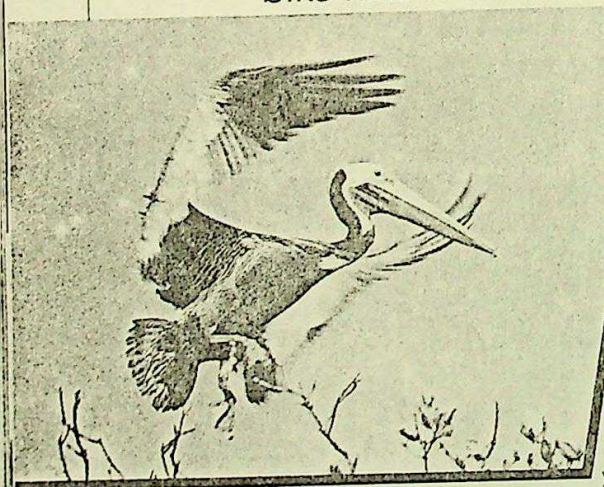
Soup tureens, plates, ladles, and spoons from 24 countries make up the first-rate and unusual collection of the Campbell Museum in Camden, New Jersey. Eighteenth-century porcelain and silver tureens and ladles—most made for the European royal families—are the basis of the collection. But the museum has contemporary works, too, as well as examples from Mexico, the U.S., and Asia—an 18th-century Chinese porcelain ox tureen is shown above. Visitors also see a silver boat tureen, complete with portholes and guns, made for Catherine the Great; a faïence rooster tureen from France; a soup plate from the White House service of Abraham Lincoln; and tureens by Paul Storr, de Lamerie, and Revere. The museum, funded by the Campbell Soup Co., is located at 1 Campbell Place, Camden, N.J.; (609) 964-4000.

FAR FROM THE MADDING CROWD

For Christmas this year you can give yourself a 4-day stay in a superb English country-house hotel. Beginning December 24, Eastwell Manor is offering guests luxury accommodations along with a children's choir singing carols, midnight mass at the local church, snooker tournaments, mince pies, and hot toddies. Eastwell Manor is a stately stone house set in 3,000 acres of Kent countryside—a 1½-hour drive or a train ride to nearby Ashford from London. The hotel has 20 large bedrooms and an excellent nouvelle cuisine restaurant. Reservations: Eastwell Manor, Eastwell Park, Ashford, Kent, England, TN25 4HR. Tel: Ashford 35751.



bike-hike in Florida's Everglades



An hour's drive east of Miami on the swamp-traversing Tamiami Trail (Route 41) brings you to a sign that says "Shark Valley." Shark Valley is a back door to Everglades National Park—the main entrance is further south—and although a couple of rangers are on duty you pay no entrance fee. There are three ways to explore the area: walking the two nature paths, riding the tram that departs four times a day, or biking the 15-mile paved path that loops like a the swamp. In case you're traveling without your own bicycles, there are rows of them near the entrance that you can borrow on a first-come, first-serve basis. The reward of going the entire 15 miles is getting to climb the tall overlook tower at mid-loop to see the almost unsettling vastness of what the Indians around here call "The River of Grass." The Everglades are the little-acknowledged life-support system for all of South Florida, a delicately balanced ebb and flow of sweet and salt, wet and dry. They teem with life. Riding your bikes with the creek to one side of you, the naked swamp to the other, you'll see a floating log suddenly transform itself into an alligator. Gorgeous water birds casually swoop down for a landing: great blue, little blue, and Louisiana herons, egrets, all sorts of ibises, and, like a distant pink cloud on the reflecting water, communities of roseate spoonbills. And there are always anhingas—the black-and-beige snake birds, which swim underwater for their supper. Little

S.F. to Host Stationery Show

The Western Stationery and Graphics Show, slated for Apr. 15-18 in San Francisco's Trade Show Center at Showplace Square, anticipates a one-third increase in exhibitors and a doubling of buyer attendance, reports Western Exhibitors, producers.

The 1983 event produced a show of national stature drawing attendance from 39 states and seven foreign countries. The show had 350 booths and drew an attendance of 4,500. This year's event will continue to exclude merchandise not directly related to the stationery, prints, and graphics industries and will promote the "California Look," which has been key to drawing such Eastern buyers as Bloomingdales, Macy's Kansas City, Neiman-Marcus, Marshall-Fields, and Hallmark Stores Kansas City. In addition, management has compiled a "European Package" utilizing generous air fares combined with accommodations in the popular bed and breakfast hotels.

Fancy Food Show Grows 20 Percent

When the ninth Winter Intl. Fancy Food & Confection Show opens for a three-day run at San Francisco's Moscone Center on Feb. 26, it will be at least 20 percent larger than last year's, with a total of 320 exhibitors occupying about 65,000 sq. ft. Once considered staid and steady, the specialty food industry has become a fast-moving business, according to Morris H. Kushner, president of the National Assn. for the Specialty Food Trade (NASFT), the show's sponsors. "This has been having a favorable impact on specialty foods, gourmet cookware and accessories, and wine," he said, adding that "this could be the most successful Winter Show NASFT has ever sponsored."

A highlight of the show will be a bus trip to the Chateau St. Jean, St. Francis, and Sebastiani Vineyard wineries to be hosted by expert Jud Healey. For tickets and information contact Jean Frame, executive director, NASFT, 215 Park Ave. S., New York 10003; (800) 255-2502.

A TOUCH OF CLASS

Original objets d'art of bygone days are usually beyond the reach of all but the wealthy collector. Though connoisseurs may cringe, imitation antique porcelain — sold as such — can satiate the aesthetic sense of many buyers who can't afford the real thing.

The main difficulty in creating modern porcelain in the old styles is matching the technique of colour control over the multitudinous shades. According to David Mou, Managing Director of Wah Tung China Co., "the paint used by our forefathers was a mixture derived from the soil in the areas they lived. As such, the colour and texture of Jiangxi paint was quite different from those of a Guangdong one." In other words, antique china from each Chinese province manifested its own individual quality through unique colouring.

Just as each Chinese dynasty had its own idiosyncrasies, so had the porcelain that each era produced. At present, the more popular items are copies from the reign of Tung Chih (1862-1875). Disproportion is the distinct feature of this period. Figures and backgrounds are disproportionately presented, while strong vivid colour schemes are favoured.

Another favourite period is the late 18th to early 19th century showing an old Canton factory by the side of the Pearl River. This elaborate, coloured china depicting Western traders in their varied lifestyles in the Middle Kingdom is the most popular theme.

The United States is at present the major market for imitation antique porcelain from Hong Kong. The American favourite is vases, the height of which may range from a few inches to several feet. Other items include 20-inch high "fresh bowls" used in the west as planters. Background colours can be chosen by the customer to complement other furnishings.

All-in-all, possession of this type of china (imitation or real) lends a "touch of class"; to which can be added — "at prices anyone can afford".

Traditions

1. Belleek Bird Stump Vase 12¼". Whether or not you are a lover of Belleek, you will readily recognise this piece as a work of art; an exquisite creation and a testimony to the world-famous Belleek craftsmen. Each flower and leaf has been hand-made and applied with the greatest of care. A must for any serious Belleek Collector.
ERB435 $695.00

2. Belleek Lotus Blossom Vase 8". The Lotus Blossom Vase has an air of elegance and opulence which cannot fail to impress. The petals are touched with hints of pink, and three bands of hand-painted gold encircle the vase.
ERB1074 $42.90

3. Set of 6 Eire Tablemats 12" x 9". Beautiful scenes of Ireland are brought to your table with these tablemats from Pimpernel. Superbly finished, they are extremely stain resistant and will withstand heat up to 100°C (212°F).
EREK024 $25.20

4. Belleek Painted Cottage Cheese Dish 6½" x 4½". One of Belleek's truly original pieces, and reminiscent of the old thatched dwellings of Ireland, this finely detailed Cottage Cheese Dish comprises tray and lid.
